PEACEKEEPING IN SOUTH SUDAN

Charles is the soldier and scholar who spoke to us in 2014 on the modernisation and international integration of our defence forces and their emergence from the analogue era into the digital age in which he had played a key role and continues to play in his new position as Director for Defence Leadership and Ethics, Defence Strategic Studies, at the Australian Defence College, Canberra. Charles had a number of overseas roles including Operation Anode in the Solomon Islands and Beersheba in Iraq and on the eve of his talk to us had been appointed Senior Military Liaison Officer and COMASC to UNMISS, the UN intervention mission to South Sudan. This gave Charles a valuable insight to the challenges facing such interventions, the interplay of cultures, structures, other nation’s interests and their profound effect on the operational effectiveness of such missions. Charles has agreed to come and share his insights with us in words and pictures. This is an ongoing issue in many other trouble spots in our world and we are fortunate to have this opportunity of learning about it first-hand.
